OLE MISS

Mississippi

Edited Annually by the Fraternities and Sororities of the University of Mississippi

DEDICATION

In token of the love we bear them, and the debt of gratitude we owe them for their uplifting influence, this volume is dedicated To Our Mothers.

Mississippi! O Alma Mater!
In our prayers we call to thee.
Speak to us thy words of wisdom,
Send thy blessings rich and free.
In thy halls we sought for knowledge;
Sought for culture, and for grace:
Still we search, with souls unsated, and
In darkness, seek thy face.
Pour out now thy cup of knowledge,
Protection grant us, mother dear, and we
In deeds will all repay!

PROLOGUE.

Reader, pause before you look
At the contents of this book.

And let us ask—

The faults and failures please excuse;
Whate'er remains, you may peruse—

And joyous be the task!

THE EDITORS.

Editorial.

WE HAVE heard for years and years that experience is a dear, but excellent teacher, and yet in the face of this fact we find that it takes something more rigid than experience to teach some people!

The Editorial Board of OLE MISS last year experienced great difficulty in getting the Annual together and in collecting from the Student-Body the material needed. It was even worse this year, and if our efforts are not appreciated we are not to be blamed. If the OLE MISS of 1903 does not come up to the standard that has been set, the blame rests upon the shoulders of those who have not attempted, in the least, to make it what is desired.

The Student-Body is expected to mold according to its own fashion the work that it gives to the world; if the OLE MISS of 1903 is distorted in figure, and uncouth to look upon, be it known, that its deformity comes from the Student-Body that it represents.

THE EDITORS.

CHANCELLOR R. B. FULTON.

CHIVALRY.

I read a tale of the long ago,
 Of the knightly days of old,
 The days of manly chivalry,
 Of warriors true and bold;
 When hearts were strong as the willing steel
 That gave its rousing ring,
 Drawn to champion virtue or strike
 For honor or the king.

Ofttimes I'm filled with discontent
 By modern society,
 And muse with secret yearning on
 The days of chivalry.
 Alas! must we no longer fight
 For honor or fair fame?
 Is all danger to them dead?
 Or are we dead to shame?

No! perish not, our chivalry;
 Unsheathed be thy sword
 Whene'er we hear fair womanhood
 Assailed by deed or word.
 And thou, my soul, be not o'ercome
 By greed of power or pelf;
 Defend thy honor with thy might
 Against thy baser self.

Hon. Hillrie M. Quin, Superintendent of Finances, University of Mississippi.

Mr. Quin has served faithfully as a Trustee of the University for several years and he is recognized as one of Mississippi's most loyal Alumni. As the Superintendent of Finances of the University he has shown marked ability; as a man he has proven himself all that Southern manhood can claim. The University is fortunate in securing his services.

THE UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE.

He sat with his love in the moonlight
 'Neath the friendly summer sky,
Telling her of his studies
 In the session just gone by.

“Teach me, please, some German,
 For I should like to know
A German phrase or two.”
 And then he whispered low,
“Ich liebe dich. Liebst du mich?”

“If we were now in the moonlight
 Beneath a German sky,
And I said these words to you,
 What would you reply?
Ich liebe dich. Liebst du mich?”

And then she gave her answer
 In language sweeter far
Than all the tender accents
 Of spoken language are,—
The universal language
 Descended from above,
That does not need translation
 Where men and maidens love.

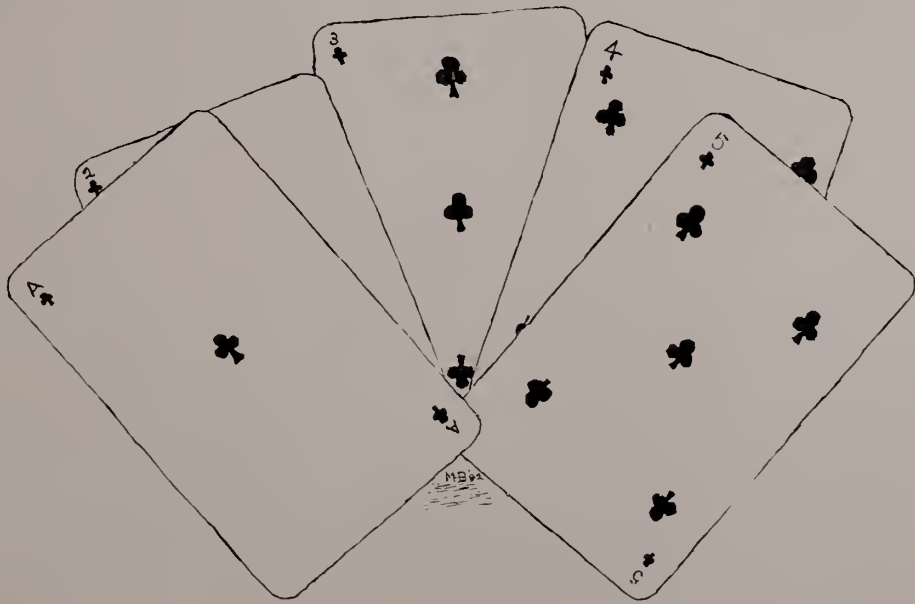

W. A. S., '02.

REFLECTION.

I sat one day in retrospection,
Recalling the days of my life
Which seemed nearest perfection—
The days when innocence was rife.
By contrast they seemed farther away
Than years would have them be,
And as I pass them o'er to-day
The reason of this change I can not see.
Why should we ever play a part?
Why deceive by word or act?
Crush the real feelings of our hearts
And be ruled by policy or tact?
To one 't is "lovely and very sweet!"
In language of mock Piety,
"A perfect love!" to another we tell,
And this to-day is Society.

CHANCELLOR'S RESIDENCE

When Christmas Came in May.

BY JAMES VANCE BOWEN, '01.

"Speaking of sweethearts," she said.

Now, we were not speaking of sweethearts. In fact, we were not speaking of anything, and hadn't been for a good quarter of an hour. I rolled over, somewhat surprised, and said:

"Well, I'll be—blessed! What's—"

Some thirty minutes before I had found her sitting under a tree with some sewing—Battenberg, I believe she calls it—and of course she looked so sweet and so demure that I—well, to make a long story short, I made a fool of myself for the 'steenth time. She didn't let me make quite such a fool of myself as I usually do, because in the middle of it she looked up from her work, which she seemed much interested in, and said: "Oh, won't you please run up to the house and get mama's scissors? These won't cut." I offered my knife, which she graciously accepted, but somehow the inspiration for my story was all gone, so after a sweet "thank you" the conversation lagged so far behind that it got lost. I lay on my back, chewing a blade of grass, and muttering imprecations.

"Speaking of sweethearts—" I sat up in astonishment. That wasn't a bit like her.

"Did you know Johnny Martin? He was in school last year."

Yes, I knew him to my sorrow, and said so, but I did not say why. Between you and me, he borrowed thirty dollars from me and never paid it back.

"Well, he's just the nicest fellow. Nothing like you." This with a most angelic smile.

Of course I asked why.

"Well, he always brought five-pound boxes, and he didn't lie on his back for half an hour without saying anything."

I suggested that she wouldn't give me a chance to say what I wanted to, and maybe he had never seen her sitting under a tree making Battenberg. I wouldn't lie on my back in the parlor, either.

"Smartie," she said, with a pucker of her nose. Her nose is pretty when it is turned up, and she knows it. She took one or two more stitches, and then, holding the work off and inspecting the general effect: "He is such a dear. At Biloxi last summer he took me sailing every afternoon." As I wasn't a yachtsman, I did not appreciate the beauty of that, and gritted my teeth in silence. "And then, last fall, when he came up to the University, he was so nice—driving, and calling, and going to the theaters. I'm so sorry that his health got so bad he had to go home."

All this was ancient history to me, and I could have suggested another reason for his departure, but I kept my peace.

"He was here Christmas. Did you know it?"

No, I was at home, and had not heard of it.

"Well, he was the only out-of-town boy there, and he was the life of our party. It was at Mamie's, you know."

Silence, while a needle was threaded, oh, so daintily.

"The decorations were so pretty—holly and mistletoe, and we received under a canopy of them. The red and white berries looked so sweet."

I looked skyward meditatively. A mocking-bird was in the topmost branch of the tree.

"Isn't it queer," she went on, after a pause, "how flat, stale, and unprofitable the Oxford youth are after association with you University boys? They are so slow."

I thanked her for the compliment, and continued to look into the depths of the tree above. It was an oak, and I saw something else besides the mocking-bird. There was silence. Then: "I like all those old English customs, don't you? Papa is English, you know, and we have them all, plum pudding, and the—the hose, you know, and—"

I looked enquiringly at her, and then back in the tree. She said: "The hose, you know,—hanging them on Christmas Eve." "Oh," I said, solemnly.

"And the holly, too; it wouldn't be Christmas without that and the mistletoe. And papa always makes us pay the penalty, too. There's no harm, is there?" she asked, anxiously, as I straightened up suddenly, with a determined look.

"Oh, no," I said, then, getting up, "Do you see that big bird's nest up there in the tree?"

She threw back her head and looked. "Why, that's not a bird's nest; that's—" But for certain reasons she didn't finish.

"It really don't work except at Christmas, but you do it so nicely I suppose it's all right—so much better even than Johnny Martin—Oh-h-h wait till I find that needle I stuck right there where your arm is." And I forgot all about the mocking-bird.

Then, later, as twilight and dew drove us in: "That's the finest bunch on the lawn. I often sit there."

So I'm going back.

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS.

SHE WALKED ALONG THE AVENUE
LEADING A BRINDLE PUP,
SAID HE "NO DOUBT ON CHRISTMAS EVE
YOU HUNG YOUR STOCKING UP."

THE MAIDEN BLUSHED AND COLDLY SAID,
"WITH JUST A LITTLE FROWN,
"YOU DON'T SUPPOSE THAT I'D PERMIT
MY STOCKINGS TO HANG DOWN."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

What makes the Junior scratch his head,
Roll and tumble on his bed,
Oaths and other bad things spread,
And wish that sciences were dead?
Chemistry!

What makes the poor Soph curse his fate;
Get up early and stay up late,
Stare at the embers in his grate,
Fills his fluttering heart with hate?
Mathematics!

What makes a man's flesh fall off,
Seizes him like an awful cough,
Makes him roll, tumble and toss.
Gives him the look of a withered corse?
Senior Law!

But what makes a man always fail,
Look like a ship without a sail,
Run to the office for his mail,
Dry up as thin as a seasoned rail?
Love!

LAST OF THE ROSES.

The last of the roses !
Oh, wintry blast,
Why do you seek
To blight the last ?
Let its soft petals
Of velvet unfold.
Touch them not, Winter,
With fingers cold.
Leave the last blossom
To brighten and cheer
Hearts, sick and suffering,
From wintry days drear.

* * * *

WINTER'S REPLY.

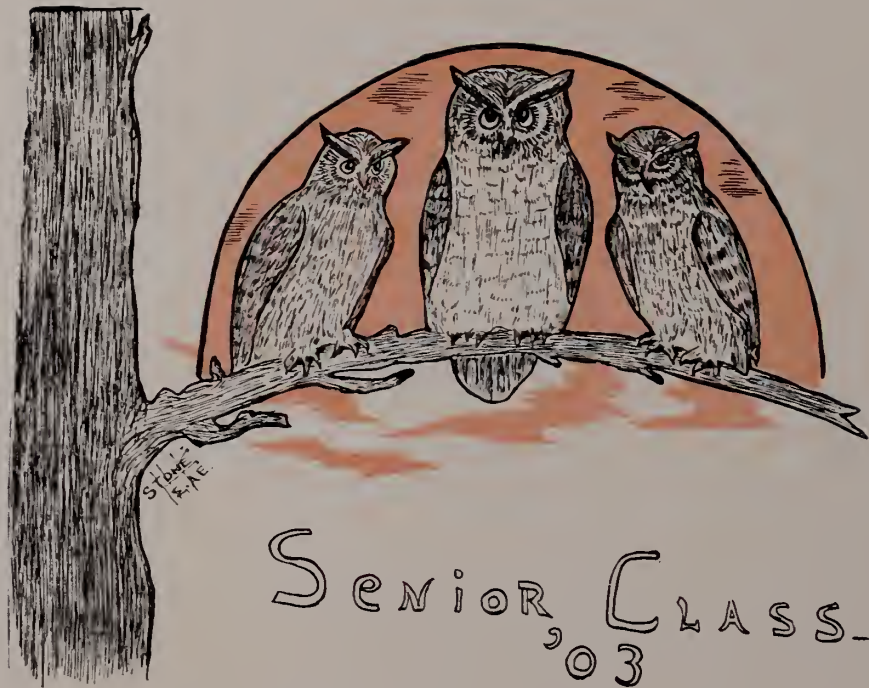

Not so: 't is my mission
With sleet and with rain
To blight every flower.
When spring comes again,
The warm sun will kiss them,
Gentle showers will fall,
Winter be forgotten,
And life come to all !

History of Senior Literary Class.

THIS class hasn't done anything very startling, so far, but we are expecting to show a few tricks to the oncoming classes, within the next few years. We are now planning several marriages, and some of us are not thinking of heeding Harry T. Howard's advice as to I. I. and C. girls. We think Mississippi co-eds are good enough for anybody, and that includes most of us, to say the least of it. Besides, it wasn't just exactly the thing for Mr. Howard to come up here and lay the corner-stone of our Woman's Building and then make a talk urging us to marry Kincannon's I. I. and C. girls! But we will overlook that, since he must have been rattled.

This class goes out strong in numbers and sweet in disposition. There are talented men and women in our ranks, if any one will take time to investigate. When we are married we will send you all an invitation, and we will be partly married soon.

Well, somebody said "cut it out." So here goes.

Junior Class History.

THE Junior Class of the University of Mississippi is a most remarkable one, having been foremost in all branches of Varsity life since its first organization. Now, it has become a custom in the matter of class history to extol in the grandest metaphors the excellent qualities of the many and varied accomplishments of the class. It is not our purpose to boast or utter aught which might mislead, for, to perpetuate our memory we need not raise our voice or pen a line, because our fame will live when our voices are stilled and pens are used no more. Nevertheless, it becomes the duty as well as the honor and privilege of the historian to compile from time to time, from the abundant data furnished, a volume of our history.

These volumes are not only for interested workers and visitors who come to Mississippi; but for the knowledge-seeking public generally. Besides these motives, we are prompted to perpetuate the many events of our career for the benefit and devoting effect upon the oncoming Freshmen and Sophomores at this institution. These two varieties of being are likely to be misguided and might perchance discredit some of the legends which cluster about the Class of '04, and it is partly in consideration for their welfare that we point them to the glorious record of the members of this class. The Seniors, it is feared, have become "set in their ways" and, lest the pangs of remorse should be aroused within them and their envy aggravated, we refrain from showing them too directly that they have left undone so many things which we have done. We, therefore, bid them take heart and begin life anew.

You may see from the foregoing, my gentle reader, what are the motives and promptings of our hearts in undertaking this work. With this clearly before us, let us come closer to the heart of our undertaking. When we were Sophomores we learned from Dr. Riley that history is not a mere enumeration of names and dates. So we ask your indulgence should you find this element lacking in our history.

Our class has always maintained a high standard in all spheres wherein it has been placed. From the time when as Freshies we first felt the importance of the Varsity's "most propitious opening" (attributing it all to our own matriculation), through the turbulent years of Sophomore Math. (still a mighty vexation to some of our souls), down to the glorious ending of this our Junior year, the Class of 1904 has been known and honored for its strength and integrity. We say these things with all candor and modesty. On the field of athletics, in the classroom, in the literary societies, and in all of our various organizations, the personnel of the class has asserted itself and won laurels for themselves and for their class.

This year to our sorrow the class has depreciated somewhat in number, and though we sincerely regret the absence of our fellow classmen and feel their loss to us, still the high standards which have marked our career have been upheld with unfaltering zeal.

That you may appreciate the achievements of this class, something of its personnel should be known. There are among us bookworms, rounders, heart-breakers, jolly good fellows, and any and all of these combined. When we meet a friend it's a jolly "Howie do?" or "Let's Walker round the Conner." It is a well-known fact that when necessary we can also make the "Furr" fly.

I am sure, my patient reader, that the foregoing facts have impressed themselves upon you, and so not to cause delay or keep you longer from the beginning of this glorious narrative. I will proceed—(To be continued in our next.)

Sophomore Class History.

ABOUT the first thing that we wish to announce is, that we have a contempt for Freshmen! Poor, insignificant beings—they are the last things upon earth and indeed have no business in the University until they can “get along” without soothing syrup, condensed milk, and teeth cutters!

When we think of how utterly insignificant and ignorant we were last year, it makes us show some feeling of sympathy for the Freshmen, although just as we said a while back, we simply can't stand Freshmen. We realize that this is a libelously written article, but we will suffer the consequences and will appeal to our friends, the Junior Law Class, for assistance (you know if there is any one in the University who feels his importance, it is the Junior Law boy). When we next appear it will be in a more elaborate manner. Thanks!

Freshman Class History.

THE "down-trodden Freshman of long ago" is no longer in existence (thanks to our patron saint, the stork), and we now enjoy privileges equal to those of the upper classmen. We do our own elections (such as they are), we conduct our own meetings (in a very disorderly manner), and we are not the least bit troubled by "other folks."

It is now an established fact that we know more than the average person does at our age—we are progressive to the end (whatever that may be). Now when we return Sophs, you can prepare to give us a hearing. It is our express intention to "take charge" next fall, and the way we will run the affairs here will open the eyes of those who now "look down upon us."

Farewell; the sap is rising and we must do something!

History of Senior Law Class '03.

HERE we must try to write in a few hundred words the history of a class composed of young hopefuls who themselves have manifested enough capacity within two short years to make and write the judicial history of this great Commonwealth for the next two score years. If the old adage is still true that history repeats itself, old Mississippi is going to have some stirring and interesting reading matter to bequeath to the next generation.

While we may not be able to boast of any Gradys in oratory, Websters in statesmanship, Marshalls in legal learning and acumen, yet it would not be safe prophecy to limit the possibilities of such a class to any circumscribed sphere of action. This class, be it said, has manifested no insatiate and "self-sacrificing" political desires and has shown that it has no patience with the pettifogger in politics, and not a one if "solicited" would accept an office of any less dignity and responsibility than that of the Supreme Justice of the State or Nation.

Now, some may be inclined to be a little skeptical in regard to some of these sweeping statements hereinbefore recited in the premises. But if you don't believe what we have to say, make a proposition to any one of the class that you want him to go to the Legislature next year, and then make him another proposition with a half interest in a ten-thousand-dollar law practise, and you will see which he will embrace—yes, hug.

As to our standing compared with classes who have preceded us—well, expect you will have to ask Governor Shands and Dr. Somerville about that. We are not ashamed of our representation on the football and baseball teams. We mention with pride, the capture of a goodly share of the official honors connected with the Record, University Magazine, and ANNUAL. And the fact that the hermit law student is precluded from any contest for honors in the academic department precludes us from cataloguing further more of his triumphs and victories.

A SENIOR'S HEART-CRY.

"Forget you?" he said in saddened tones,
 "Forget the woman I love!
Let the sun while giving its golden light
 Forget the stars above!
Let the light of day forget to shine,
 Let the stars forget to peep,
Let the winds forget the murmuring pine,
 Let the waves forget the deep!

"Forget you? O woman, what thoughtless words
 Ofttimes escape your lips!
The flower may blush when the humming-bird
 From its bosom the nectar sips;
But blushes like yours form a veritable net
To entrap the poor youth, who can never forget!"

History of Junior Law Class.

THE Junior Law Class of this session compares very favorably with its predecessors. We have some promising young men upon our roll—some of them will promise anything. We are very well represented in all the walks of college life and some of the runs.

Our class is noted for its good looks—"Spec" Hairston, Tom Campbell and Grace, for instance. It can not be said, however, that these have a walk-over.

"Mose" Jones is one of our shining lights, even though he thinks an unintentional setting of one's neighbor's house on fire isn't larceny. He refused to believe there could be the intent necessary to the crime!

We are forging to the front and do not fear the class that goes before us. There is room at the top and we are yet at the bottom.

It would not be exactly in keeping with our modesty to take up more of your valuable time, but you shall hear from us again.

That Erstwhile Girl of Mine.

By "MUG," '05.

That Erstwhile Girl of Mine—

What thoughts does she bring home,
As I think of the time
When she was "all my own"!

I loved her when a lad;
As a maiden she did say
She w'd be my dear heart
Forever and a day.

'T was on the back-yard gate
That all day we would swing;
(She was just barely eight)
"I loves you," she would sing.

She was my own at sweet sixteen,
And I her hero to be:
She said thro' all, yea, thick and thin,
That she would still stick to me.

We were to marry soon,
"In that good old summertime";
'T was to have been in June,
But some "guy" beat my time.

I've oft tried to forget,
Yea, many, many times,
But my thoughts will turn to
That erstwhile girl of mine.

You ask, "Who beat you out?"
His name—I could not tell,
But if I had him down,
I w'd more than give him ——.

A DREAM.

I had a dream in the days gone by :
 I dreamed of a garden fair ;
I dreamed of a maid with soft blue eyes
 And a rosebud in her hair.

She offered her dimpled hand to me :
 I kissed her finger-tips ;
Then blushed 'neath the light of her eyes serene
 And the smile on her ruby lips.

I tried to speak to this queenly maid,
 Tried to utter some word of praise ;
But the look she gave would have surely stayed
 The boldest knight in the olden days.

But she smiled again — 't was divinely sweet —
 A smile that was born above ;
I knelt on the greensward at her feet,
 And wooed and won my Love.

AT a recent meeting of the Board of Editors of the MAGAZINE Mr. Crisman handed in his resignation as Editor-in-Chief. During the past session and this one Mr. Crisman has labored for the MAGAZINE in that capacity, and his efforts have been greatly appreciated by the Board. He has raised the standard of the MAGAZINE as a college publication and filled his place with marked efficiency. It was therefore with great reluctance that the Board accepted his resignation. It shall be the aim of the present Editor-in-Chief to keep the MAGAZINE up to the high standard set by him, and in order to do this we ask the earnest co-operation of the student-body.

A VALENTINE.

'T is not for your eyes I love you,
Nor yet for your brow so fair—
Though they gleam like the stars above you
With light such as angels share.

'T is not for your darkling tresses,
Nor yet for your rosebud lips,
Whose kiss such wine expresses
That it thrills to my finger-tips.

Not those lips – but the love they whisper
In the even when day is done,
Which makes in the gloom of the vesper
Seem worth while all the struggles begun.

Your trust and your hope—yea, your doubting,
That proves in itself your love's reach,
Confiding so sweet, and your pouting
When oft for your love I beseech—

All this but increases my passion
And fires all my feelings anew.
What thoughts else my consciousness fashion,
This one thing I know—I love you!

MISS.'S LAST GAME OF THE SEASON

Mississippi, 10; Tulane, 0.

Thursday, Nov. 27th, our team, considerably crippled, but dauntless, went up against the team of Tulane University of New Orleans, La., and scored a victory of 10 to 0.

Our center, Ames, and two halves, Critz and Crisman, were disabled and joined the retired list. With a new man in as center and that same old determination, we gave Tulane what she reasonably expected.

The villainous fumbling so often spoken of by the New Orleans papers showed what might have been the score had we handled the pigskin with care and accuracy. However, Sultan's timely tackle, Beanland's fine runs, Magruder's and Foster's line plunges, carried our colors safely to victory.

The trip to New Orleans, besides being victorious was more than pleasant and the game was a brilliant ending of one of our most successful football seasons.

Dr. Leathers can not be too highly praised for his successful managing, and Coach Martin has established himself as a coach, and it is our sincere hope that he will be with us another season.

Mississippi is to be congratulated upon the standing her team has taken. For good, clean football, she can show a fine record. In the matter of training she could have done better.

Next session we hope to see more enthusiasm than was shown this year and we can predict a glorious future unless something unforeseen prevents the return of our eleven.

It is to be hoped that we may be able to start a subscription among the Alumni to help athletics. This is done in nearly every University except Mississippi. Our Alumni will do as much for us if we only put the matter before them in the proper light.

The baseball season is next in order, and with material at hand we can reasonably look for a winning team.

Dr. Leathers has kindly consented to manage the baseball team, and we are the more en-

* Mr. Foster was not in school after Christmas.

The Popularity of "Lazy."

"WELL, boys, it was just this way. Jim Greene—we all called him 'Lazy'—and it fit him like a new shoe—entered the Varsity in the fall of 1901. He never took an interest in his classes, missed the rise in fifteen out of eighteen points, read Street and Smith's 'choice literature,' chewed cheap tobacco, looked slouchy, was lazier than anybody on record, simply didn't give a d—n for anything or anybody, and just such a fellow who couldn't be very popular if he wanted to and it was against his religion to want to.

"There was one thing about 'Lazy,'" continued Benson, who had been asked to tell about "Lazy's" popularity, "darned if he wouldn't go to chapel every day, and although he seemed to pay no attention to anything that was said, he used to drawl out in that pine-ridge accent of his, 'Course I like to go, else I wouldn't be caught there!' He always expectorated fluently upon being questioned about anything. Well, when spring opened up and baseball was all the talk, we were looking about for material. The first man to appear upon the field was 'Lazy'—I wish you could have seen that uniform! Well, sir, I'll be blamed if it didn't look like the cast-off livery of some of Elizabeth's footmen! Whew! Green and red-striped shirt and yellow trousers! If he didn't look like a typical Reuben I'll pay for the drinks! Everybody laughed at him? Well, I guess! And every evening it was the same old thing, guying 'Lazy' about his suit and his attempts to play ball! Some one would yell at him, ' 'Lazy,' are you going to make the team?' And he always let fly a copious stream of tobacco juice, smiled a doubtful smile, and replied—' Don't know—reckon not.'

"The lazy devil could hold a ball if you knocked it to him, but you could never count on him covering much ground. And when it came to batting, he was a back number. Occasionally he would hit it, and when he did, he always kissed it farewell—this wasn't often, though.

"There was one thing you couldn't do—you couldn't rattle 'Lazy.' Oh, no; he was too darn slow for that—he never saw the point until a week or more, and then, he didn't care. Sometimes, you'd be walking with him and he'd chuckle to himself; that was a sure sign that he had probed into some joke hurled at him on the diamond.

"It used to do the kids good to watch 'Lazy' make faces when he was at the bat—it was certainly a show. But just as I said, he wasn't popular and we knew he'd never make the team. Well, he hadn't been faithful for nothing, and I want to say right here, he never missed an evening from the field. Coach Holmes made him 'sub' for his faithful work and promised to let him play in one big game. It was when we were playing Tulane a series. We won Thursday's game, put in a sub-pitcher Friday, and the boys played loose, and lost by three scores. The boys seemed to think they had a snap, and Tulane took advantage of the weak playing.

"When Saturday's game was called, we put Fred Day back in the box and had our brag nine on the field. Steve Franklin was playing right field for us, and he was a crack, too. You fellows didn't know him, but you've heard of him often enough—played with the 'Chicks' after he left here. Up to the seventh inning we were eight to Tulane's four. During the seventh, Steve made a long run for a sky-scraper and just bagged it when he stepped in a hole and sprained his ankle. Steve held the ball? Well, you know it! We had to take him out and put the doctor on him. Much to the surprise of all, 'coach' put 'Lazy' in his place. Several of the boys went to 'coach' and asked for Thompson, Mines, or Jenkins, but he reminded them of the fact that he was attending to his business; said we had the game beat, and he owed that much to 'Lazy.' I'll swear I never felt as sick in all my life as I did when I saw 'Lazy' waddling off to right field. Well, he just played like h—l for a few minutes; caught two flies and put out the side. We failed to score in the seventh and when 'Lazy' went to his corner I felt like the knockout blow would come next.

"Tulane got two hits, and had a man on first and second. A long fly to center was bagged, but couldn't be fielded before the two runners got to second and third. Tulane flew over to 'Lazy' and he fell all over himself—Tulane's two runners walked in! And the man on third seemed confident! Tulane singled and landed safe on first. I got desperate. I saw my 'green' in the wind and I felt raw! Another fly goes up to 'Lazy' and he never touched it. Tulane scored! O 'Doctor Carvel'! The perspiration rolled off of me! Seven to eight and no man out! Tulane flew out to second base. Tulane hit to third, and her man was caught trying to come home; the next man flew out to center.

"Mississippi came in and didn't make a run! I'll tell you boys, it hurts like h—l to witness a scene like that! Tulane pranced up and gave us the high guy; we looked cheap, and felt it too!

"Tulane got two hits, and put a man on first and second—next man got a bunt, but the batter and the man on first got out on a double. Tulane had a man on third, though, and I felt goose-bumps all over me. The next man put one over 'Lazy' and he missed it forty feet. Tulane ties the score! Gentlemen, let me tell you that was the roughest house I ever witnessed! It looked like a rebellion to me. Our fellows told the coach they'd quit playing if he didn't put

'Lazy' out. But that didn't 'feaze' him—he had a head of his own and 'Lazy' stayed in. So did the others! The next batter flew out to left field and Mississippi came in for her last showdown. Well, I 'm from Missouri and you have to show me. But there was no use in showing me anything 'green.' I had my share in the 'hock'! Jones fanned. I almost fainted, and if I hadn't stuck that barbed wire in my hand I guess I would have. Smith fanned. I yelled out, 'Five dollars to the man who'll knock a home run!' Tulane's guys said, 'It's no use, bully; put up your money and take your medicine like a man!' And some of our boys turned their saddened countenances to me and said, 'Your money is safe, Ben; don't worry!' I thought so, too! It was 'Lazy's' first time to the bat; my heart sank to my toes! He changed his 'cud' to the other side of his mouth, spit in his hands, and took position very carefully. Two beauties passed over the plate, and I held a post to keep from falling. The twirler tried for a drop, but 'Lazy' caught it on the drop and the next thing I saw was his cumbersome figure passing the bases in a terrible gallop! We yelled and whooped and cheered him until he struck home just before the ball fell in the catcher's glove. Yes, that's how he got his popularity; that's why his picture hangs in the Athletic Hall, and that's why he will always be remembered."

THE METAMORPHOSIS OF COLLEGE LIFE

From the Book of College Life.

CHAPTER I.

THE college man cometh up in the early fall and falleth ere the spring hath opened. He riseth late and goeth upon his way rejoicing, but in the even the faculty cutteth him down. The cares of life are upon him and verily he groaneth in the spirit. He refuseth to be comforted, but goeth to the bank and draweth upon his father, and straightway he goeth and bloweth it in. He receiveth his money from home and knoweth not whence it cometh or whither it goeth. He receiveth his report and understandeth not the contents thereof. Verily, his report is filled with failures and demerits. He groaneth in the spirit and complaineth. He loafeth much, but never becometh weary. Truly, happiness he hath in abundance. He hath said in his heart, "Much study is a weariness of the flesh and of making books there is no end." He goeth to his examination and when he hath gazed much upon it, signeth up, and goeth out with bowed head. He smoketh much and cheweth and straightway he spitteth upon the floors and walks. He talketh politics much, but athletics more, and doeth nothing. Verily, he is fearfully and wonderfully made. He pretendeth much, but knoweth little, and of his conceit there is no end. He bucketh against the faculty; he receiveth much attention therefor, and straightway he packeth his trunk for removal. He leaveth like a wolf in the night and the darkness covereth many of his sins.

ANON.

THE KISS.

'T is said that in the olden times,
In the days of ancient Greece,
The days of rural happiness,
When all was love and peace ;

Tending each day his bleating flocks
On the meadows and the leas,
There lived a handsome shepherd lad
Whose name was Kisthenes.

A sweetheart had this Kisthenes,
A saucy little miss—
Disdaining names so dignified,
She always called him Kiss.

They often strolled upon the plain,
Forgetful of the flock,
Or sat and planned their future life
Beside some sheltering rock.

While on her way to the trysting-place
She found a pearl one day.
" 'T will a fortune be for Kiss and me ;
I wonder what he 'll say."

She scarce had picked the jewel up
When with looks malign,
A ruffian confronted her
And said : " That pearl is mine."

She put the pearl into her mouth
To swallow it if she must,
Rather than surrender it
To the greedy robber's lust.

She dodged around a friendly rock,
The robber to elude,
And swiftly ran to Kisthenes.
The ruffian pursued.

But when he saw the strong young man
He gave up the quest.
She ran into her lover's arms
And was folded to his breast.

He held her firm in his embrace,
Her arms pinned to her side,
So she could not release herself,
Even if she tried.

" Here, Kiss, take this pearl," she said,
And held it 'tween her lips,
U'turned like a crimson rose
Whence a sparkling dewdrop drips.

Now, when the lad first felt the thrill
Of this new-found delight,
He made her take the pearl again,
While he held her tight.

But already it occurred
To this quick-witted girl
That the pleasure of the process
Did not require a pearl.

And, so, when she with many trials,
Had amply proven this,
She named the new discovery
For her lover, Kiss.

They agreed to keep it secret, but—
Can anybody doubt it?—
When next she saw her best girl friend
She told her all about it.

This friend tested what she said,
And finding it was true,
She spread the news to all her friends,
And they all tried it too.

Nor did the flight of many years
Cause lovers to forget,
But still the kiss was handed down—
And it is current yet.

So this little country maid,
And her lover, Kiss,
Left lovers all this heritage
Of concentrated bliss.

W. A. STEVENS, '02

TO THE SWEETHEART OF MY CHILDHOOD.

Little Sweetheart, Love's fragrant flowers are dead—
 The petals crisp and dry.
 Let not thy pearly tears be shed;
 It is not meet that you should cry.

Where are the gentle whispers, Love,
 That once fell on my ear?
 Hidden 'neath Cupid's folded wings,
 Sobbing and trembling with fear?

Ah! 't was a dream of bitter-sweet:
 A vision that now is fled!
 Weep not, lady mine; in thy fairy retreat,
 Resurrection comes but to the dead!

From out the grave of the dead Love-flower
 In the meadow where daisies rest,
 A lily grows in a leafy bower,
 A moonbeam kisses its snow-white breast.

ROOTERS' SONGS.

(TUNE: "John Brown's Body."')

We 'll sing another song for Mississippi's team :
We are not as weak as others say we seem ;
Send up shouts and cheers that 'll reach to the sky
While the team goes marching by.

CHORUS:

Missi—Missi—Mississippi!
Missi—Missi—Mississippi!
Missi—Missi—Mississippi!
Our team goes marching on!

We will never falter till we win the game to-day,
Or else we 'll stand up bravely and hold the foe at bay ;
We are not afraid when the team begins to play
To sing our marching song!

CHORUS:

Missi—Missi—Mississippi!
Missi—Missi—Mississippi!
Missi—Missi—Mississippi!
Our team is marching by!

A yell for our captain, boys—give it loud and strong ;
He will never fail us, though the game be hard and long :
Brace up, lads, and join us in our song,
While the team goes marching on!

Missi—Missi Mississippi!
Missi—Missi—Mississippi!
Missi—Missi—Mississippi!
Our team is moving on!

(TUNE: "I've Anchored My Soul."')

Our team was once playing far away from its home,
Far away from the Rooters' Brigade,
But the faith that we had in each jolly lad
Accounts for the record they made.

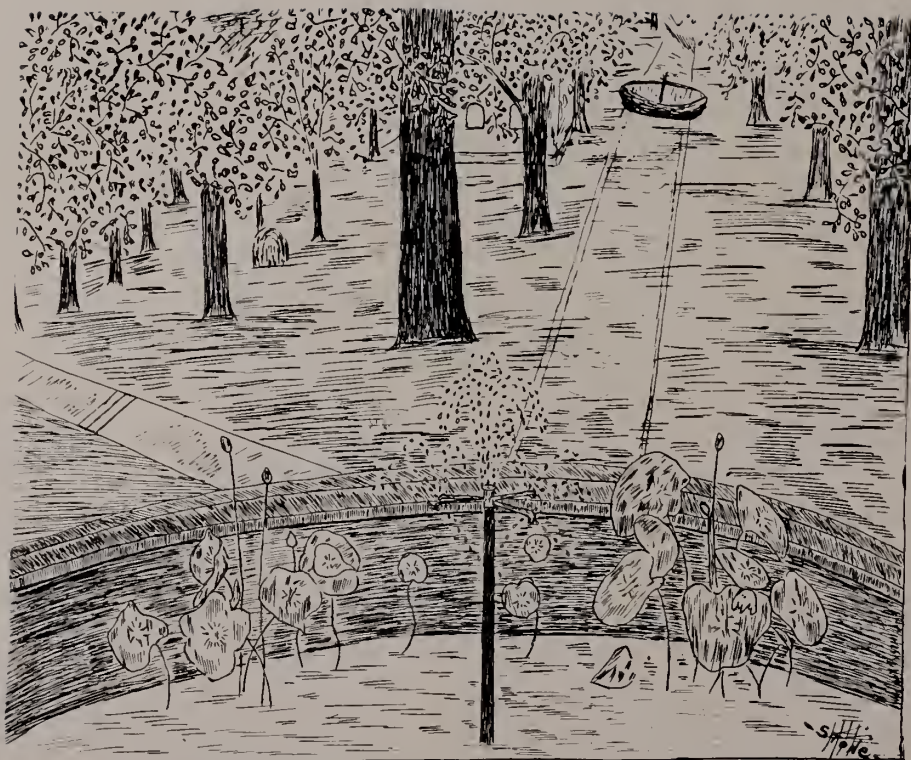

CHORUS:

Join us once more in the glad refrain,
Sing for their record so bright!
Through the struggle and strain, they 've brought vict'ry again,
And we'll sing 'em a song to-night.
Sing for the colors, for red and for blue,
Join in the happy refrain,
To the red and the blue our boys will be true,
And bring us vict'ry again.

CHORUS:

Ring out the yells with voices strong,
Join the old Rooters' Brigade!
Shout with much glee for the new victory,
And shout for the record they 've made.

The Department of Elocution and Oratory.

MISS SARAH MCGEHEE ISOM, Instructor.

FORTUNATE is the institution that can boast of a chair of Elocution and Oratory, but doubly fortunate is the institution that is blessed with a talented, enthusiastic, and accomplished instructor.

The University of Mississippi can boast of not a few orators within the last few years, to say nothing of those who finished "when oratory was in flower." In the Oratorical Association Contests, both State and Interstate, her record has been exceptionally bright.

The diligence with which our instructor trains her pupils, the enthusiasm with which she fills them, the ease and grace which she cultivates in them, in fact the finish that she gives them, have made for her a record not by any means confined to the State of Mississippi.

Miss Isom was a pupil of the talented Murdock and she is, indeed, a worthy example of the great school that he so earnestly advocated. Mississippi, the love for oratory and the unparalleled Southern talent will never weaken with such an instructor within your walls!

A STUDENT.

MISS SARAH McGEHEE ISOM.

JUNIOR: "I have a difficult Dutch lesson to prepare."

SOPH. DRANE (surprised): "What is Dutch?"

(5 P. M.—Town clock striking.)

FRESHIE ENOCHS: "Who is dead?"

(Freshie—seeing the basket system for his first time.)

SENIOR: "Where are you from?"

FRESHIE: "Crystal Springs."

FRESHMAN: "Why do co-eds go to church so early?"

BARRETT: "Because they want to be there in time for the hymns (hims)."

MR. DRANE (seeing "dates" on Mrs. Crockett's table for the first time):
"Say, Cockran, what are these things made out of."

PROF. SOMERVILLE (to Law Class): "Gentlemen, you may omit on review the chapters on Dower and Trust for Married Women."

MR. MILLER: "Doctor, are you going to let us skip the chapter on Idiots and Lunatics?"

PROF. SOMERVILLE: "Indispensable, Mr. Miller; I will have to examine the class along that line."

MUG (to a Soph. Elocution Student): "Who is going to play the part of Shylock in Julius Cæsar?"

"OBSTREPOGRASS" SMITH (interrogated upon law): "Say, Smith, what do you think of introducing conflicting testimony?"

SMITH: "Condenserated testimony, Boss? Well, I think it ought to be confutrified."

MISS SULTAN (to Mrs. Hunt): "Mrs. Hunt, I want to get the last copy of the Lookout."

DR. SOMERVILLE: "Mr. Bordeaux, can you give me the gist of the Sir William Penn case?"

BORDEAUX: "The case Penn. v. the Railroad, Doctor?"

GOVERNOR SHANDS: "Mr. Myers, why couldn't an atheist testify under the common law system?"

B. L. MYERS: "Because he couldn't remember accurately everything that happened in connection with the case."

Sam Collier and Charles Phillips spent several hours in a fruitless search for a volume of Ibid.

GRACE (at the Blackstone Club the day set for electing the Anniversarian):
"Mr. President, this is election day, I believe. I move we elect an adversary."

Here's where we chop it off, Gentle Reader!

INSTRUCTION AT

Nelson's Business College

41 Madison Street
Memphis, Tenn.

Is not a copying from text-book, superficial, catch-penny scheme, but is planned with a view to familiarizing the student with the most practical and up-to-date ideas of commercial paper, business customs, etc., through the medium of daily actual business transactions between the students, teachers, and various officers of the institution, thus guaranteeing a practical instead of a theoretical knowledge of bookkeeping and business. ¶ We do not resort to conditional guarantee position schemes, or other questionable methods to secure patronage, thereby commanding the respect of the educated and thinking classes. Endorsed by the business men of Memphis as well as elsewhere. Employs only competent men teachers. Since we have no vacations, a splendid opportunity is afforded university students to obtain a

Some of our customers have considered it to their interest to call us “Our Printers” ever since they gave us their first order, when we showed them we were interested in their printing beyond the fact that it carried with it a money consideration. We have a pride of our own about “Our Printing,” and this, we doubt not, has had a great deal to do with our success and the reputation our establishment enjoys.
